It was a cold Halloween night in San Francisco. The wind was cold and the night was freaky. Laurianne, a beautiful girl was dressed up as a zombie. She was with her best friend Marley who was dressed up as a motor. They were ready to get some candies even if outside was freezing and alarming.

10 minutes later, they had some candies in their jar. They went to a house that was decorated with scary decoration, Marley didn't want to ring because of the decoration. Laurianne took his hand and went to ring at the door. An old grandpa with no hair and a big mustache opened the door. He told them to follow him inside because his candies were in the kitchen. Laurianne followed him without asking questions but Marley was a little anxious. As soon as they close the door, it locked automatically

• When they entered the house, it was gloomy and there was dust everywhere. They followed him into a small room with only one candle. Before they even realised it, the old man closed the door behind them and locked them in. They were really anxious about what the old man was going to do with the two best friends. They looked through the room and saw an old wardrobe with a lot of spider webs. They grabbed the bull by the horns and opened the closet. There were a lot of things like hangers, weird products and a lot of clothes with holes in them. They were both terrified and they kept hearing weird noises in the house. Their time was almost done.

Marley had a flash. He told Laurianne that they could use the products in the candle to try and break the wall. They first tried with a product called oil painting because it is really inflammable. Laurianne threw it in the candle but the candle just died. Tears started to fall down Laurianne's cheeks. He went crazy when he saw that the candle died so he started to look everywhere to find something to help them. The two best friends heard foot steps becoming louder and louder. They had to find a solution really fast.

Marley found matchstick under a pile of used clothed. The footsteps were really close to them they needed to do it faster. Laurianne took one matchstick and lit it up. Suddenly, the door opened on the old man. He was furious and was ready to kill them. Without even thinking, Marley took the matchstick and threw it at the old man. He was so old that he couldn't move and he just stood there while he was burning. The two best friends didn't loose a second to run out of the house. They ran really fast and far away. One year later, they are still traumatized about what happened and they never entered in a stranger house again.
